January 23, 2002 LB 848

That's foolish. It does not resolve the issue that the lawyer messed up anyway. It lets the lawyer beat you twice--in court, then ruin your life. So as angry and frustrated as people become, when a lawyer has done them wrong, that person should never give the lawyer the last word by taking the lawyer's life and going to the penitentiary. That's foolish. But the profession, these judges should be doing all they can to trumpet to the public the high standards that the profession and those who practice it must maintain. When the lawyers know that the public is being informed, that will be a brake, b-r-a-k-e, on misconduct by lawyers. When people are educated and informed they cannot be so easily tricked. That's why churches like to keep especially women, keep them ignorant, keep them barefoot, keep them pregnant, because then they can be misused, they can be held in inferior subordinate positions. Many people in the legal profession do have high standards. It almost causes me to choke to say this, but I'm going to presume that the vast majority of judges are ethical, professional, dedicated people. I'm making a presumption. I don't have empirical evidence to establish that so maybe, instead of making a presumption, I should say I hope, it would be my wish. But if there are such people in the judiciary and if they do adhere to those standards, why is it necessary for me to go after a judge whose conduct is open and notorious and must be known about by these upstanding judges? My amendment that is before you, so you will not think that I'm asking you in any way to discipline a judge or a lawyer, would simply make all of this fingerprinting and the rest of it apply to every applicant of the...to the bar. Let me ask Senator Brashear a question, if I may.

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: Senator, would you respond?

SENATOR BRASHEAR: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Senator Brashear, we agree that the good moral conduct or character, whatever that is, that a person must have and demonstrate in order to enter the practice must be maintained as long as a person is a lawyer. Is it possible that a person, after becoming a lawyer, could commit the kind of criminal offense that would prevent him or her from being admitted if the bar committee knew about that offense? Could...
